Saint Louis Wood Workers Guild

Gary Hinegardner performed a demonstration on the basic operations of using a lathe for the STL Wood Workers Guild. It was somewhat of a complicated task due to the vast differences in the level of lathe experience for the different club members.

Gary spent time discussing the different types of lathes and tools. Most of his focus was on turning safely. The topics including turning with a proper stance and using an appropriate drive spindle. For example, using a Steb Center spindle which will yield to lighter chisel pressure and not drive the through a chisel catch.

Gary also spent time illustrating the changing grain direction in a piece of timber as it rotates on the lathe. He then demonstrated how to cut, while the wood grain fibers are supported by other fibers and how much better a finish this process leaves on the project.

Finally, Gary expressed an interest in developing some demonstrations which would be of interest to both clubs. Some topics could be: Finishes, Design, Wood Id, Wood Movement, or Surface Treatment. The clubs could also share ideas concerning the operation of the club itself.
